Question: What was the historical significance of Queen's Manifesto (1858 AD)?

Historical importance of Queen's Declaration (1858 AD): - The following is the historical importance of Queen Victoria's manifesto.

- (1) On the basis of this declaration, India no longer belonged to any particular company but became a colonial part of the British government. This gave the Indians an opportunity to raise their demands and problems in the British Parliament.
- (2) Through this declaration, Indians got back the right of adoption and got rid of Dalhousie's state usurp policy and Wellesley's policy of subsidiary treaty.
- (3) Through this declaration, the British government made a commitment to abide by the company's earlier treaties with the princely states.
- (4) Through this manifesto, the British government gave a message not to interfere in any religious and social issue of Indians.
- (5) By accepting the above facts in this manifesto, the British government saved its colonial empire from disintegration for the next 90 years, because there was no major mass movement after that.
